THE PREFACE.

T*Hat this CLAVIS is one of the DESIDERATA SCHOLASTICA, I presume no ingenuous Practitioner, in the ART of TEACHING will deny, if he consider,*

I. That many a Child that can recite a great part of his Grammar Rules memoriter, as they lie in order, yea, and which is more, can give the sense of a Rule propounded, ipsissimis alicujus interpretis verbis, is notwithstanding so far from being able to give a particular Rule, when it is required, that, although he be allowed the use of his Book, he cannot so much as tell where to look for it: And,

II. That, this being a Truth undeniable, it is far better that a Child should have some means at hand whereby he may presently help himself in

THE PREFACE.

this case, than that he should either spend his time in beating his Brains, and turning over his Book to no purpose; or else give his Master the trouble of shewing him some Rule or other almost every minute. For my own part, Experience hath sufficiently convinced me, that the want of such a Clavis as is here tendered, is the principal reason why Grammatical Analysis doth seem so tedious to young Grammarians. I shall not use many words in recommending this little Essay to the Publick: because I know very well, that Trial and Experience must do that, and not a Romantick Preamble; nor will I assume the vanity to aver, that it is so exquisite and elaborate, that it is altogether incapable of future improvement: for, who knows not, "Ὁν ῥᾶν ἔστι τις εὐρημένοις περὶ δεινὰ π; Such as it is, I humbly tender it to the judgment of the ingenious and impartial: But as for the supercilious, self-conceited Critick, that likes nothing but what is of his own devising, I except against him, as being a Judge incompetent, and shall only give him that sullen Reparty of the old Roman Epigrammatist to chew on: Carpere vel noli nostra; vel ede tua.

TO THE PERUSER.

FOr your better understanding the scope and use of the ensuing Table,

Note 1. That you are to count all the Verses in your Grammar from the beginning of Propria Quæ Mari- bus to the end of As in Præsenti (you will find them to amount to 581) setting in the Margin directly against every fifth Verse its proper number: that is, against the fifth Verse, 5. against the tenth, 10. against the fifteenth, 15. against the twentieth, 20. and so on to the end.

Note 3. When you find a Verb thus written as this is (for example) allicio, viz. with a Vowel standing above the line over the head of another Vowel, you may conclude that that Verb is a Compound Verb, and that the Vowel above the line belongs to the Simple Verb, but is changed in the Compound Verb: E. G. allicio is a Verb compounded of ad and lacio; but lacio, in composition, is made licio; according to Verse 395. &c. And to intimate this change of the first Vowel, you have the said Vowel set over the head of that into which it is changed. The like you may observe in others.

Note lastly, If any of these Figures, 1. 2. &c. stand before a Noun, it shews the Declension; if before a Verb, it shews the Conjugation thereof.

There are certain Simple Verbs, which in composition change their first Vowel. Those every young Learner should be well acquainted with: To the end therefore that they may all be seen, uno quasi intuitu, they are here set down together.

Præ-Advertifement.

HE that intends to make use of the ensuing Table, must in the first place number the Rules of his Syntax, and write numeral Figures in the Margin of his Grammar and Accidence directly against the first Line of every Rule.

And because to differ from me in computation will in a manner frustrate the whole Design of the Table, I have, to prevent even a Possibility of so doing, set down the beginning of each Latin and correspondent English Rule, (for that they commonly receive mutual illustration) in such manner and order as they are to be counted and figured, that the Numbers standing against the Rules, may exactly agree with the Tabular references.

Ad Lectorem.

Non est, Amice Lector, ut sequentis Indicis usum multiplicem atque insignem utilitatem pluribus exponam; cuilibet enim Animum à præjudiciis vacuum advertenti primâ fronte patet, Tyronem inde egregia, tam ad Genesin quam ad Analysin Grammaticalem, subsidia mutuari posse. Sicubi in capite aliquo, aut Canone assignando tibi minùs satisfecerim, litem, quæso, ne moveris, modò ne id erroris in Praxin redundet: Nam velim scias, me mihi ipsi (occurrentibus subinde dictionibus quæ ad aliquam ex Regulis Lillianis commodè referri non poterant) in omnibus usquequaque satisfacere non potuisse.

Si dictio-recta quæpiam, aut aliud quid notatu dignum hinc inde occurrant, tu illa ex stellulâ ad Oram Indicis appictâ facile dignoscet.
